

Summer Fête Smackdown!

- Diana Dawkings, Ed in Chief

Chaos at Museford's yearly Summer Fete this week as a resident who we have identified as Tim Garden trespassed on Karen Duppelbottom's Mayoral speech and attempted to interrupt her with information a deal with Company Company is allegedly trying to strike with Lord Hardcastle. Not content with that chaos, the event's organiser, Katya

Kearney, then took event security into her own hands and struck Tim in the face before fleeing. In the face of all this chaos, this reporter asks, when will stability will return to Museford?

Chancellor's Poopy Problem

- Coriander Stern, educational analyst

Sad words from Museford City University this week as the beloved Chancellor, Clio, has been forced to resign following the discovery of evidence that she defecated in the library. The Executive Assistant to the Chancellor, Samantha Collins (she/her) has strenuously objected to the accusation, and is appealing the decision to the Board. The Chancellor was not available to comment, but is reported to be devastated, recovering only with belly rubs and reassurances that she is, infact, a good girl.

Company Company Secure the Swamp

- Bill Bryan, Journalist

The Company Company continued it's rapid expansion with two massive new expansions, the large convenience store TERPSICO and the Museford Cheese Marketing Board Stadium (now the Company Company Stadium). The CEO Cass O'Leary, stated in an interview that:

"Games and sports will continue like they always have, just now with the investment and oversight Museford deserves."

Latest Polls (Sponsored by Paul's Poles, All Poles, Except the North One!)

- Steve Turl, political correspondent

Current polls reveal Karen Duppelbottom has an edge over her competitors but not an insurmountable one, with Evangeline Chevalier hot on her heels, Mort a little behind her, and Chris Politick dragging his feet somewhat in last. But all experts agree, it's still anyone's game. Muse News reminds you all to get your votes in when polls open this week!
